

Features

Perfect Weekends

Gear

Travel

Mind & Body

Sports

Food & Drink

Utah Gets Wet

Wed, Jul 8, 2009

Food & Drink, Travel

Courtesy of High West Distillery

Two years ago, after discovering a long-forgotten Utah law allowing distilleries, biochemist David Perkins started making the spicy, complex High West whiskey. This month, High West moves into a renovated 1900 stable next to one of Park City's lifts, where it will be integrated with a restaurant and, come winter, be the world's only ski-in, ski-out distillery ($45; highwestdistillery.com).

This article originally appeared in the July/August 2009 issue of Men's Journal.